Hongkong, March 18th, 1878.

An interesting case has just been decided. the Supreme Court at Singapore, before Sir left on the 6th instant, also for this port. THOMAS SIDGREAVES, the Chief Justice of the Straits Settlements. The proprietors of the Straits Times had applied for an injunction to restrain the proprietor of a journal called the Daily Sheet from publishing Reuter's telegrams, which the plaintiffs had acquired, by purchase, the exclusive right of publishing in Singapore until within three days after their appearance in the Singapore Daily Times. It appeared that up to the end of the plaintiffs to publish Reuter's telegrams the 670 and the minimum 570. No rain fell during day after they appeared in the Daily Times upon payment of $20 per measem; that on the S1st January, the defendant intimated his intention to stop publishing, and cancelled the arrangement made with him; that, nevertheless, he continued publishing the telegrams, but peid nothing for them; that, on the 5th Pebruary, the plaintiffs wrote to him requiring him to cease publishing the telegrams, to which he replied that he was advised that his publishing the telegrams was no infringement of their rights; and that he still continued to publish them. It was contended by the plaintiffs that no person has a right to publish the telegrams till after a reasonable time, when the news contained in them ceases to be copyright; and it was stated that the Daily Advertiser paid the plaintiffs so much a month for the privilege of publishing them. These facts were admitted by the defendant, who urged, however, that the plaintiffs had no copyright in the telegram nor any right to restrain any person from publishing them after they had appeared in the Daily Times. Sir Thomas Sidereaves, in giving judgquestion is not what arrangements were come to between Router's Company and the plaintiffs, but whether by the publication of the telegrams in their paper at a considerable cost the plaintiffs acquired such a property in the telegrams as would entitle them to prohibit any other person from publishing them in any other newspaper. It seems to me quite clear that they have acquired such a property. Mr. VAUGHAN contended that the publication on the following day was not a matter that the Court could interfere with, but he admitted that if the republica, tion took place on the same day, then it would be an act of piracy. This is practically conceding the point contended for on behalf of the plaintiffs. It is impossible to draw a

YOROHAMA.

The first fire of any magnitude which has ever controd in Chinese town broke out on the evening of the 3rd inst. Hitherto the Colestial population have been singularly exempt from the ravages of fire. The fire broke out in the very neart of Chinese town, in a house occupied by a number of Chinese and Japanese, and which bore the reputation of being the harbour of a noted gang of gamblers. It is difficult to ascertain the cause of the conflagration, some ascribing it to the overturning of a lamp, which probably is correct. However, the flames soon gutted the building where they originated, and extended to the adjoining houses. The fire brigades, both notive and foreign, were promptly on the spot and took up their stations so as to meet the flames on all sides but one, which was difficult to got at A strong detachment of native police turned out, we suppose for the purpose of keeping order but in this they were not very successful, for many became so fruntie with excitement as to slash about them with their staves most promisedously. The even ing was very calm, and though the flames burnt furiously they did not spread so rapidly as to prevent the residents of the houses in the immediate neighbourhood saving most of their affects. The confusion was great, every coolie who chose to work going in on his own responsibility without any system and without any head to direct him except his own. Chinese and Japanese were rushing about with various articles; and some women and children at one time were in great danger of being trampled under the feet of the surging multitude. Two foreign gentlemen, observing their danger, kindly made a passage for them until more open ground was ceached. Contingents from the various men-ofwar wore landed and worked with a will. The fire lasted from the time it originated until it was brought under subjection, about two hours. during which time it consumed the buildings on a space of ground about forty yards wile towards.
